

How we evaluate online learning? (presentation)

Graham Attwell

Graham Attwell will give a short presentation on how to evaluate online learning. He will look at different theoretical and practical approaches to evaluation and their strengths and weaknesses. He will encourage participants to ask questions and will point to further resources for those wanting to carry out an evaluation.

Graham Attwell is a researcher and developer working for a small company, Pontydysgu based in Wales, UK. He has previously worked as a youth worker and trainer. His interests include the training of trainers, the development of new pedagogies for learning with technology, informal learning and careers advice guidance and counselling. He likes making multi-media, especially internet radio shows.

<http://www.pontydysgu.org/pontydysgu-and-people/graham-attwell/>