

Online education for youth workers, potentials and dilemmas (presentation)

Ivana Volf

The presentation will explore possibilities of introducing online learning into educational programs of youth leaders and youth workers through the example of National Association of Youth Workers in Serbia. It will start from motivation to have online learning in regular training programs for youth workers and youth leaders, the challenges we encountered in the process and the ways we tackled them. At the end we'll present our conclusions and ideas for going forward to making the online learning experience for youth workers more users friendly, offering the possibilities for developing and implementing methodology of non-formal education through different online tools. If possible, the floor will be open for further discussion with participants who will also be invited to give feedbacks and recommendations for future development.

Ivana Volf, youth worker for 15 years, working as well as trainer in the youth field and currently employed as programme coordinator in National Association of Youth Workers in Serbia (NAPOR), in charge of capacity building of youth workers and youth leaders and professionalism in youth work, through implementation of training programme and process of validation of previously attained competences in youth work.